Question: What are my odds of being audited?

Answer: Less than 1 percent of tax returns are audited. The three main ways that a return is selected for an audit are 1) random selection, 2) matching supporting documentation against the return, and 3) the discriminant function system, DIF, which assigns numerical weights to specific items on a return. A return might be audited if the total DIF score for the return exceeds a predetermined threshold. Specific red flags that trigger audits are posted on our website at www.BGRllp.com/news/auditodds
